STILL ANOTHER DISHONEST OFFICIAL. A GEORGIA POSIMASTER EMBEZZLES POSTAL

MONEY ORDER FUNDS-THREEY THOUSAND DOLLARS MISSING. IBY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE! WASHINGTON, Thursday, Sept. 14, 1841.

Mr. Semmes, late Postmaster at Atlanta, Ga., was here a few days ago, endeavoring to relieve himself from the charge of embezzling Government Post-Office funds to the amount of $30,000, for which he is now under indictment. His accounts having presented a confused and suspicious appearance, a special agent of the Department was sent from here to investigate Mr. Semmes's transactions, when it was discovered that the money, including Postal order funds, was short to the amoun and could not understand where the missing fonds ha gene! His ignorance did not acquit him, and he will be tried next week. His own papers and accounts will con vict him. A *pecial agent is in charge of the office.

PAYMASTER HODGE'S CONFESSION. HOW THE FRAUDS WERE DISCOVERED-STATE-MENT OF THE PAYMASTER-GENERAL-THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT TO BLAME.

MOW THE FRAUDS WERE DISCOVERED—STATEMENT OF THE TAYMASTER-GENERAL—THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT TO BLAME.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The following is a copy of Major Hodge's letter of confession:

WASHINGTON, Sanday, Sept. 10—p. 10.—Gen. B. W. BRICK—Nor. I have to inform you that I am unably to close my accounts, and that I owe the frightful amount of about $60,000, which sum I have lost during the last few years in stock speculations, going deeper and deeper, in hope of retrieving myself. I have no excuse or natitigation of my control to offer, and propose to take the full gation of my control to offer, and propose to take the full consequences of my sins. I had thought a week ago of consequences of my sins. I had thought a week ago of consequences of my sins. I had thought a week ago of consequences of my sins. I have been led on by the infatuation that awards attends the course I entered on a had my sins. I have been the my property I have been led on by the infatuation of hope and fear I have gone through, and constant care to avoid detection, were be oming too strong. I desire to turn ever my property I have as a small selection of the my property I have as a small selection. I have been the week allowed to si cover the defalcation sooner. Gen. Brice also denies the report that Hodge, after suspicion had first been attached to him, was allowed to draw any checks except such as were necessary to transfer the balances to the proper officers. The particulars in the case of Major Hodge, as ascertained in conversation with Gen. Brice this morning are as follows:

On the 12th inst., the Paymaster-General reported to the Adjutant-General of the Army the fact of defalcation and embezzlement of a large sum of the public meney pertaining to the department by Major Hodge, that the military might take such action as the case seemed to demand. Following which, Major Hodge, then in arrest by the orders of the Paymaster-General, was immediate ly transferred as a prisoner to Fort McHenry, where he is at this time in close confinement, the at this time in close continement.

The Paymaster-General made a concise statement for the information of the Secretary of War, of all the facts of the case, as derived from the confession of the delinquent paymaster, and confirmed by an examination of his papers and accounts. On the 7th instant circum-stances had come to light in reference to a single official praction of Major Hodge involving a disputed vouch er for $10,000, which aroused suspicion of fraud, and which, on being interrogated, he failed to explain satis-

which on being interrogated, he failed to explain satisfactority. Therefore the Paymaster-General immediately issued an order arresting his functions in the Pay Department, relieving him from duty, and requiring him to proceed to close and render his accounts and turn over to his designated temporary successor. Major Rochester, Paymaster, all the public money for which he was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was accountable. After the lapse of a reasonable time it was reminded of the necessity of its inamediate accomplishment, and on stonday, the noth instant, he addressed the above letter to the Paymaster-General.

Major Hedge has been employed for years on special Service in the Paymaster General's office, service which could only be trusted to an officer of intelligence and studie; and, macover, one in whom the highest confidence could be repeated. As such he was selected and retained by the former Paymaster General. Col. Andrews, diceased, who on tean Brice's relieving him of the charge of the effice and the department, in October, 1864, commended values. However, therefore, unlassitatingly continued by tean failes in the same branch, while from time to time of the various darlies were assigned to him, and as a general trile were most thoroughly and satisfactedly excessed by him; and so it continued down to the events of last week.

As nothing occurred to suggest to the Paymaster's time to time timer various daties were assigned to him, and as a general rule were most thoroughly and satisticately executed by him; and so it continued down to the vects of last week.

As nothing a centred to suggest to the Paymaster's Office the slightest suspicion of Hodge's wrong doing, he pays do his crimarheareer until an accident in reference to another matter prompted the order to close up and rander his account with an exhibit of his money balance due. It is found that the transfave all been perpetrated in and through the Treasury proper, and fone by means of Hodge's disbursing account with the Assistant Treasurer in New-York, where he has also had large credits, the money need for his stock and gold gambling operations having been drawn in each from the Treasury in large sums. Here, Gen. Brace contends, was a failure of the Treasury to choree the requirements of the law and the require a dolar of cush, and it should have been made by checks, each covering the amount of the vouchers to be paid, and their nature, with the name of the person to whom payable. On this point, ton, Brice reterred to the Act of Sarch 2, 1855, and circular instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury large sums of money in notes delivered to him or some bearer, payable to cash or bearer; the checks so paid having been minimentally in the such large amounts as $20,00, $20,000, $40,000, and even $50,000, "The se," continued Gen. Brice, "are the mysterious checks with which Hodge has conducted his framiblent transactions; and I can only say that if any one of these highly irregular and unauthorized acts had been made known to me, it would have apprised me of the franct, and assuredly have been visited with condign action." The actual amount of Major Hodge's deficit, determined by a careful examination, is $475,509.75.

HODGES'S NEW-YORK SPECULATIONS. Although the defalcation of Mr. Hodges created the utmost astonishment among the great number who knew him in Washington, there was a very small circle of people in New-York who were not only not surprised at the developments, but had even devoted time and thought to con-jecturing the manner in which he had so conducted his operations as not to have incurred suspion before. To these few it was a well-known fact that Hodges was a heavy and often unsuccessful Wall-st. spec-ulater. Frequently he would have a line of stocks exgold market equivalent to about as much more. It is known that he was already a stock operator in 1864, or sooner, when the passion for gold and stock jobbing was at its hight. Once drawn into the mac-strom of speculation he found himself powerless to escape. Never was the old story of the moth and the flame better illustrated than in the present instance. At times he was very successful in his operations and again he was particularly unfortunate. The magnitude of his operations steadily increased, until they assumed frightful proportions, and when he lost, which of late was gen-operations steamy meressed, unit they assumed right proportions, and when he lost, which of late was generally the case, he lost heavily. Notwithstanding he was such a heavy operator, he rarely came to this city, generally sending his instructions by mail or telegraph.

Hodges had implicit confidence in the judgment of a well-known stock operator, to whose discretion was left the ordering of the purchase or sale of specks by the thousand shares. At times Hodges would give peremptory orders, but generally deferred to the views of his susiness confident. This continued for a long time, but Hodges's operations became more and more unfortunate, and the demands of those who executed his orders for more 'margin' became correspondingly more frequent. So often did chocks and drafts for $10,000 or more come to this city to set; bet he demands of Wall-st, that it excited comment among those cognitant of the fact, and gave rise to the following: One person, who was in the secret of Hodges's transactions, was very partial to operating in the stock of a prosperous Pennsylvania rall-road. Thus railroad was alieged to have an inexhaustible supply of a certain commodity at one end of the line, and an inexhaustible demand for it at the other. This jurious likefied Hodges to this railroad, explaining that he delicated the design of the management of his stock. Hodge finally resumed the management of his stock.

though in Washington, and an inexhaustone the stock money in Washington, and an inexhaustone of his stock Hodges finally resumed the management of his stock eperations, and although he received suggestions as to the manner in which he should operate, he paid little attention to them. For a time his prospects brightened, and he made considerable money, which was again swept away by unfortunate transactions. A little before the time suspicion was first aroused against him and the pylassier-General concluded to investigate his accounts.

he was primitted to come to New-York. He stayed here two or three days, remaining in Wellerd Broad-sts. to or three days, remaining in Wallerd Broadests, uring the greater parties of business bours, a appeared so nervous and ill at eac that some of the erks who were in the babit of doing business for him crks who were in the babit of doing business for him He appeared so nervous and ill at ease that some of the clerks who were in the babit of doing business for him remarked that there cause he sometime the neather with him. He returned to Washington on the evening of the 6th inst.—on the morning of the 7th the surptions of the Paymaster-tieneral were excited as to his accounts. At the time of this discovery Hodges was known to have been "short" of nearly all the principal stocks on the "list." The only exception was the stock of the Handbal and St. Joseph Railroad, which he was carrying to a limited extent. He was also "long" of gold to a great amount.

THE NORTON DEFALCATION.

Five of the nine bondsmen of Postmaster Jones assembled at his office in the General Post-Office, vesterday afternoon, to discuss the question of the Norton defalcation, their relations thereto, and the best measures for the disposition of Norton's property. They adhered to their resolution, previously expressed, of paying the Government the amount of Norton's indebtedpaying the Government have been officially informed of the defalcation. They are Mr. Childs of the Contitinental Insurance Co., and Samuel W. Smith, Secretary of the Empire Insurance Co., each of whom is liable for $10.000. Postmaster Jones telegraphed for Mrs. Jones, his wife, in order that he might place all his property in the hands of his bondsmen, so that if Norton's property should prove insufficient, the bondsmen might reliaburse themselves from the Postmaster's property. There was a runer, yesterday, that the bonds of the different departments of the New-York Post-Office have been suspended, but upon inquiry it was proved to be false.
